

Posting about your own work, without sounding like a LinkedIn guru.

A PROMPTING TECHNIQUE FOR EXACTLY THIS.
SWIPE →

🚀 Exciting news! I've just completed an incredible journey|

YOUR PROMPT

Write a short LinkedIn post announcing that I've just finished a practical micro-course on AI prompting.

you 9:41

🚀 Exciting news! I've just completed an incredible journey learning prompting techniques! 💡 Key takeaways that completely transformed my approach: mastering the art of strategic prompting, unlocking AI's full potential, driving 10x productivity gains. The future is here, and I'm thrilled to be part of this transformation! #AITransformation #PromptEngineering #Innovation #FutureOfWork

Ask a chat assistant for 'a LinkedIn post' and you get its best guru impression. Would you post that? Neither would we.

It imitates the loudest posts it has read, because you never told it whose voice to use.

So, name your voice. Part two of the prompt says how it should sound.

YOUR PROMPT

Write a short LinkedIn post announcing that I've just finished a practical micro-course on AI prompting.

Tone and style:

- Friendly, approachable, understated, sincere
- Simple wording, no exaggeration
- 5 to 6 sentences, no emoji pileups
- Avoid LinkedIn buzzwords like "game-changer" or "10x productivity"

you 10:04

I recently completed a short micro-course on AI prompting, and I found it really useful. I learned a lot about getting better results from AI tools, and I'm looking forward to putting it into practice. Highly recommend it if you're curious!

2

Now it sounds like a person, and still says almost nothing about what you did.

So hand over the facts: what you did, one detail only you know, why it was worth your time.

YOUR PROMPT

Tone and style: friendly, understated, sincere. Simple wording, 5 to 6 sentences.

Context and background:

- A 10-minute micro-course on prompting for work messages: Slack, product updates, LinkedIn posts
- Main thing I learned: prompting is specific techniques you can practise, not magic
- Since then I add a tone block to every draft, which saved me three rewrites this week

you 10:26

I spent 10 minutes on a prompting micro-course this week, and it has already saved me three rewrites of the same Slack message. The change was two lines about tone, added before the request. Turns out prompting is a set of techniques you can practise, rather than a knack you either have or you don't.

24

9

6

10:31

Okay, send me the link please 🙌

Three parts, in this order:

1

THE REQUEST

What you want written.

2

TONE AND STYLE

How it should sound, and how long.

3

CONTEXT AND BACKGROUND

The facts it can't guess.

The same three parts work on a Slack message, a product update, a release email.

The shortcut to 'sounds like me': paste one of your own past posts in as a style sample.

YOUR PROMPT

Here is a post I wrote myself. Match this voice:
[paste your post]|

A chat assistant mirrors patterns, so give it yours. Go and find the post you were happiest with, that's your sample.

Being visible in your industry shouldn't need a voice that isn't yours. Rebuild your own post in Challenge 3 of Write Better with AI: Prompting Foundations for Product Managers.

LittleParrot.app*First challenge free 🧡

Save the tone block for your next post 📌